Ⅱ 次の英文を読み、問いに答えなさい。

Long ago a man ①call Taro lived near a large lake. He was 29 years old but still had no wife. He really wanted to marry a beautiful girl.

One day Taro was crossing a bridge. ②He found a strange animal. It was lying down on the bridge. It looked like a human, but its face was as black as *ink and its eyes were as green as *emeralds. Not only ③that, but its teeth were like that of a shark.

Taro asked the strange animal, "Are you all right?"

"I'm a shark-man. I used to work at the *Palace of the Dragon King, but I lost my job because of a mistake and had to leave the Palace. I have no food and no place to stay tonight. If you feel sorry for me, please find me a place to sleep and some food to eat."

"Come with me. I have a large garden with a *pond. You can live there as long as you want. I'll also find some food for you."

The shark-man had a place to live and enough seafood to eat.

Half a year passed. One day when Taro went to visit a temple, he saw a beautiful girl. She had beautiful long black hair and white skin. He fell in love with her at first sight. He followed her back to her house. He asked some villagers about her. They told him that the girl's name was Hana and her parents wanted five hundred *jewels as a gift to marry her. ④It was impossible for him to give them so many jewels.

After seeing the beautiful girl, Taro couldn't forget her, even for a moment. He couldn't sleep well and he didn't feel like eating anything. At last he got sick. At that time he thought that he was going to die.

Taro said to the shark-man, "⑤I take / nobody / you / of / will / care] after my death. I feel sorry for you."

The shark-man suddenly began to cry, and his tears changed into beautiful jewels ⑥fall like rain to the floor.

When he saw ⑦this, Taro jumped out of bed and said, "I've gotten well. I'll never die." The shark-man stopped ⑧cry. He said to Taro, "What happened to you?"

"It's a long story." Taro then explained the situation. "So I need five hundred jewels to marry her. ⑨I / you / I / again / cry / want / to] so I can get five hundred jewels."

The shark-man said to him, shaking his head, "I can't. I cried because I thought you would die. Now you've gotten well, so I can't cry anymore."

"What shall I do? Without five hundred jewels, I can't get married to her."

After thinking for a while, the shark-man said to him, "Why don't you take me to the ocean? If I look at the sea and think of the happy days I spent there, I may feel homesick and cry again.”

The shark-man spent all morning the next day on the seashore. He looked at the sea and talked about his life at the Palace of the Dragon King to Taro. Soon he felt homesick and began to cry again. His red tears changed into red jewels. At last, Taro got five hundred jewels. He shouted with joy, “Now I can marry her.”

Just then, the Palace of the Dragon King came up from the sea. The shark-man said to Taro, “The king is calling me. I must say goodbye to you.”

The shark-man disappeared into the sea. Taro sent five hundred jewels to Hana’s parents and got married to her.
